

Safe, Legal & Free Methods to Incorporate Images into a Document for Education

“Just let me use Google Images!!!!”

Sorry, no can do...the following disclaimer is from Google:

“The images identified by the Google Image Search service may be protected by copyrights. Although you can locate and access the images through our service, we cannot grant you any rights to use them for any purpose other than viewing them on the web. Accordingly, if you would like to use any images you have found through our service, we advise you to contact the site owner to obtain the requisite permissions.”

Your friendly LRC Staff suggest any and all of the following:

1. Copy the image directly from one of our Internet subscriptions, such as our online encyclopedias, online databases, or our online periodicals. As we pay a yearly subscription to these services, we do not need requisite permissions to copy their graphics. You must cite these sources as Online Images.
2. Scan a graphic from a book. Legally, you can copy up to 10% of any book without requisite permissions. You must cite these sources as Print Images.
3. Take a digital photo yourself. You are the “owner” of said photo, so there is no need for permission. Digital cameras can be checked out through the LRC Circulation Desk. By all means, give yourself some credit and cite these as Print Images.
4. Use any graphics library or gallery from any of the school’s computer software applications. Software site licenses allow for users to incorporate graphics from these applications into their own documents without requisite permissions. Microsoft Office is the biggest and best with near daily updates. No need to cite this source.
5. If you are going to use a search engine, then,
 - a. Use any search engine with a “.gov” or a “.mil” in the domain search field
 - i. Recommend Google Images
 1. Any United States URL containing “.gov” or “.mil” is free and legal to copy without permission
 - a. example of a non-United States .gov URL
 - b. read the restrictions under the heading Images and photography
 - b. Search with the term “public domain” added to your keyword(s) in the search field
 - i. Any public domain site is common culture site where the content is free and legal to use for commercial or non-commercial purposes
 - c. Then, be sure to read the site to see how the phrase “public domain” is being used
 - i. Not Public Domain example
 - ii. Public Domain example
 - d. Read the legal disclaimers on the site
 - i. Pepsi Cola site permits one download
 - ii. Coca Cola site permits more than one download, but only within a specific section of their site
 - iii. NFL site requires written permission
 - e. You must cite these sources Online Images.

pictures, videos, sound effects and/or music*